

Request for Proposals: Journal of Insurance Regulation Editor

The Journal of Insurance Regulation is seeking candidates for editor. The Journal of Insurance Regulation (JIR) is a peer-reviewed, open-access publication sponsored by the National Association of Insurance Commissioners. The Journal seeks to connect state insurance regulators with cutting-edge, high-quality research in the regulatory arena through rigorous peer review and independent editorial oversight.

The JIR editor(s) work with Center for Insurance Policy and Research (CIPR) staff and the JIR Editorial Review Board to ensure all journal content provides true benefit to its readers and is of the utmost quality. CIPR staff provides significant publishing and administrative support in the production, copy-editing, and marketing functions of the JIR. The Journal of Insurance Regulation is an open-access journal, providing free and public access to all published content.

The JIR welcomes applications from individual candidates as well as co-applicants proposing to serve as co-editors. Co-editors are expected to work collaboratively and to clearly articulate how responsibilities will be shared.

The editor(s) is/are responsible for:

- Ensuring a minimum of 10 high-quality articles/year are published in the JIR
- Coordinating the peer-review process with the editorial review board
- Coordinating with authors including soliciting new authors and maintaining relationships with previous authors
- Selecting editorial review board members
- Coordinating with CIPR staff on publishing, marketing, and content strategies
- Coordinating with CIPR staff on annual Regulatory Research Symposium
- Participating in the CIPR Advisory Council
- Promoting the JIR to peers and colleagues

Interested candidates should prepare an application packet that includes:

- A current vita
- A three-to-five page proposal summarizing:
  - Your qualifications for the position
  - Your interest in insurance regulatory research and knowledge of the NAIC
  - Your vision for the JIR

Compensation is provided on a per-article basis for articles accepted for publication in the Journal of Insurance Regulation. Travel funding may be available to support editor participation in select JIR- or CIPR-related meetings and events, including the annual Regulatory Research Symposium.

Applicants should send materials to Jeff Czajkowski, Managing Director of Insurance Research, Analytics, and Policy and Eryn Campbell, Regulatory Research Services Manager at cipr@naic.org by June 15, 2026.

The selection decision will be made by August 14, 2026. The editor term will begin on January 1, 2027. Current editor(s) will assist with a transition period during the fall of 2026 to ensure continuity of editorial processes and institutional knowledge.
