Re: Proposed Review of Governance for Material Financial Policy Initiatives

The Risk-Based Capital Model Governance Task Force recommends that the Executive (EX) Committee include a new charge for the Financial Condition (E) Committee directing it to evaluate whether in its oversight of the Capital Adequacy Task Force, and other task forces and working groups under its jurisdiction relating to risk-based capital (RBC), provides a process for analyzing both retrospective and future adjustments to RBC, incorporating regular reviews of RBC outcomes, and ensuring future adjustments are made in alignment with guiding principles. The Financial Condition (E) Committee processes should ensure meaningful commissioner engagement, appropriate stakeholder engagement, and communication with the Executive (EX) Committee so that the process improvements are supported by needed NAIC staff resources.

Re: Proposed Review of Governance for Material Policy Initiatives

I recommend that the Executive (EX) Committee undertake a focused review of how material policy decisions are developed and advanced through the NAIC committee system. The review should determine whether existing processes consistently provide meaningful commissioner direction, appropriate stakeholder engagement, and clear accountability for significant policy choices. Its findings should guide whether changes to existing practices or additional governance mechanisms are warranted.

The Risk-Based Capital Model Governance (EX) Task Force was established in 2025 in part to facilitate coordination and alignment among NAIC committees and task forces involved in RBC modernization. Its discussions have raised governance questions that extend beyond RBC and are appropriate for Executive Committee consideration. The objective is to understand what is working well, where practices may be inconsistent, and whether targeted refinements would improve the process, without presuming a procedural failure or a preferred organizational structure.

Assessment of existing processes. The Executive Committee should examine how material initiatives move from the identification of a risk through the selection of policy objectives and potential approaches, technical development, stakeholder input, and necessary approvals. The review should assess when commissioners receive the underlying evidence, reasonable alternatives, and potential effects, and whether they have a meaningful opportunity to provide direction before consequential policy choices are settled.

The review should also examine how material policy choices are distinguished from technical implementation; how charges, referrals, and development plans establish the scope of work and responsibility for decisions; and how stakeholder feedback informs both policy direction and implementation. Where several committees are affected, it should assess whether responsibilities and decision points are clear, including how significant questions are elevated, reconsidered, and resolved.

A practical approach would be to select a limited number of recent or ongoing initiatives and reconstruct their decision paths. Examples could include a recent or proposed RBC factor, an initiative addressing emerging investment risk in structured securities, or a reinsurance or reserve-related solvency initiative. For each, the review should establish what direction was provided, by whom and when; what information and alternatives were considered; and how stakeholder input and required approvals were addressed.

The assessment should account for relevant confidential supervisory work and nonpublic briefings, recognizing that the public record alone may not capture all analysis or commissioner engagement. It should consider how the policy rationale and decision process can be communicated while protecting confidential information. The review should neither prejudge the merits of individual initiatives nor interrupt ongoing technical work.

Consideration of governance improvements. If the Executive Committee identifies areas for improvement, it should evaluate changes proportionate to those findings. Options could include a common materiality screen, clearer written referrals and development plans, commissioner policy decision checkpoints, concise policy briefs, and procedures for resolving significant questions that cross committee responsibilities.

The Executive Committee should consider whether enhancements to existing letter committee structures, a commissioner-led Policy Steering Committee, or another formalized governance mechanism would best address any identified needs. Any recommendation should preserve existing committee responsibilities, technical expertise, and required approval authorities; protect confidential supervisory information; and avoid unnecessary duplication or delay. Routine technical matters should continue through established channels.

To make agreed improvements consistent and durable, the Executive Committee should consider incorporating them into the Committee Charters and Charges Policy Manual as it is developed. Written procedures could clarify when commissioner direction is needed, how material policy decisions are documented, and how responsibilities carry forward through changes in committee leadership.

Requested next steps. I respectfully request that the Executive Committee consider this review and determine its scope, timing, and next steps. Specific case studies and developed structural proposals can be considered after the Committee accepts the referral and establishes the review process. The immediate request is agreement to examine current practices and use the findings to determine whether, and how, governance should be strengthened.

MEMORANDUM

Date: November 2, 2026

To: Executive (EX) Committee Members

From: Kay Noonan, Chief Legal Officer

Subject: Proposed Bylaws Amendments

Attached for referral to Plenary on your approval are amendments to the NAIC Bylaws. This memo describes the process leading up to this proposal, as well as the key points in the proposal.

PROCESS

The Executive Committee called for a review of the Bylaws in 2025. The Bylaws have not been significantly updated since 1999 and the purpose of the review was to assess clarity and consistency with current operations and procedures and modern governance principles. Consultants retained by the NAIC conducted an extensive Member survey to identify areas for improvement. The revised Bylaws have been discussed by NAIC Members at multiple meetings. A small group of NAIC Members, including the NAIC Officers, worked with the consultants and NAIC management to revise the proposal and incorporate Member feedback throughout the process.

At the Executive Committee meeting in Dallas on Monday, November 16, the Committee will discuss the proposed amendments and potentially refer the proposal to Plenary for its consideration at an open meeting to be held in December.

PROPOSED REVISIONS

The Amended Bylaws were redrafted to stay as close to the existing Bylaws as possible while improving the organization of the document and taking into consideration governance best practices and the unique features and makeup of the NAIC. The Amended Bylaws have been restructured to follow a more conventional format with numbered articles and sections and reorganized to bring together related topics for clarity and consistency. In addition to the structural and organizational changes, there are substantive changes highlighted below. None of the proposed revisions impact NAIC Committee activities, interested party participation in NAIC Committee activities, or NAIC work product development.

WHAT CHANGES

- The Internal Administration (EX) Subcommittee has been renamed the Administrative Oversight Committee to better describe its function.
- The Letter Committees are now referred to as Committees of the Members and the descriptions of the E and F Committees have been updated to reflect their current scope.
- Language has been added to expressly allow for remote meetings.
- Detailed Officer election procedures have been deleted, and Executive Committee will consider an updated election procedure during the coming year.

WHAT STAYS THE SAME

- The NAIC is wholly governed by its Members.
- Executive Committee serves as the Board of Directors of the NAIC.
- Committees of the Members operate under existing NAIC practices and policies concerning open meetings, exposure of documents, input from interested parties, and development of work products, including model laws, proposed regulator guidance, and updates to NAIC Manuals and Handbooks.

On July 22, 2026, the Reciprocal Exchanges (E) Working Group exposed revisions to Model #440 and Model #450 to address the charges of the Working Group with an August 28, 2026, comment deadline. Further discussion is expected in either December 2026 or early 2027.

Amendments to the Privacy of Consumer Financial and Health Information Regulation (#672)—During the 2022 Summer National Meeting, the Executive (EX) Committee approved a Request for NAIC Model Law Development for a new model that would replace existing ones. The Privacy Protections (H) Working Group approved this request on Aug. 2, 2022. However, after working on a draft of a new privacy model, the Working Group determined that the better path forward would be to amend the existing NAIC privacy model, Model #672.

On July 24, 2026, the Privacy Protections (H) Working Group exposed the full revised draft of Model #672 for a 60-day comment period which ended on Sept. 22, 2026. Oral comments will be heard at the Fall National Meeting.

New Model: Residential Mitigation Grant Program Model Act—During the 2026 Spring National Meeting, the Executive (EX) Committee approved a Request for NAIC Model Law Development for a new model law to establish statewide residential mitigation grant programs to reduce structural vulnerability of existing residential properties.
